Introduction

This book has been penned with the purpose of helping authors of papers frame their papers according to the insights gained as the result of having read the book. Forty articles were edited by an editing group at Sharif University of Technology. All papers have been published in reliable and high-quality journals.

The errors in the first draft of the articles have been extracted and categorized as the following:

1. Common Errors in Word Usage
2. Articles (Definite and Indefinite Articles)
3. Preposition
4. Subject – Verb Agreement
5. Pronoun – Antecedent Agreement
6. Tense (Simple Tenses - Perfect Tenses and Progressive Tenses)
7. Active – Passive Structures
8. Conjunctions
9. Word Order Errors
10. Useful Phrases in Article Writing

The book is organized in the following fashion:

The extracts that are perceived erroneous are presented and then our suggestions are provided. It is noteworthy that our suggestion having incorporated by the authors appear in published papers. For ethical reasons the identity of the authors remain anonymous and attempts have been made to provide as little but informative as possible. Towards the end of the book, you will find a list of useful expressions that are used in scientific papers.
