Preface

Listening is the ability to accurately receive messages in the communication process. Listening is key to all effective communication, without the ability to listen effectively, messages are easily misunderstood – communication breaks down and the sender of the message can easily become frustrated or irritated.

In real life, listening is used twice as often as speaking, which in turn is used twice as much as reading and writing. In the classroom situation, listening and speaking are used far more than reading and writing since they are appropriate starting points for language learning especially when learners have low literary levels.

Despite all this significance, listening for long was considered to be a passive skill, leading to its being neglected in language teaching programs. Since the early 1970s, a growing interest in this skill brought a new instructional framework to language classrooms.

This book is about listening comprehension practice by listening to the news and is intended primarily for English learners. Although we have done our best not to let any mistakes go unnoticed, the problem of any potential deviations remains with us.
